The Golden Rule

One of the most well-known of all of Jesus' teachings is what many call "the golden rule." Even among those who are not Christians and who have never read God's Word, the golden rule is known and valued as a good rule of thumb in human relationships. Jesus' words in Matthew 7:12 are: "Therefore, whatever you want men to do to you, do also to them, for this is the Law and the Prophets", but many people know it better as simply: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." Either way, this simple statement is immensely powerful as it relates to our interpersonal relationships. But as Christians, we must understand that these words from our Lord, though they have become somewhat cliché in our world, are not simply good advice, they constitute an authoritative command. As those who have devoted our lives to godly living and Christian service, it is our responsibility and obligation to obey the commands of our Lord, including this one. When we fail to do so, we have failed to do the will of God and have sinned.

So, what does it mean to do unto others what we want them to do to us? It is such a simple concept and yet so often misunderstood or just ignored. We all know how we want to be treated by others and how we feel when we are mistreated. We want people to treat us with kindness, respect, and regard. We want others to be patient and forgiving toward us, knowing that we make mistakes from time to time. We want to be treated with honesty, fairness, and politeness. We want others to be thoughtful and caring toward us in our times of need. We expect these things. In fact, we demand them. This law of Christ simply states that we must treat others with the same thought, consideration, and respect that we demand for ourselves. We must control our tongues, our attitudes, and our actions in a way that builds love for Christ and for one another. We must refrain from talking about and tearing down others, whether in their sight or behind their backs. Christ commands us to treat others in the same way that we want to be treated. I know that there is certainly room for improvement in my life in this area. How about you?
