Library News

A revised edition of the book, A STUDY OF ANGELS, is in our library. It is a fascinating and informative reading about these servants of God that we read about in the Bible. The author, Edward P. Myers, Ph.D., is a former professor of Bible and Christine Doctrine at Harding University. A list of questions at the end of each chapter and a Biblical survey of Angels is included.

Thank you

Chase Park Church Family,
"We would like to thank you for all the support and help involved with our shower and wedding. Thank you for all the wisdom and guidance shared that has made such an impact in both our lives."
"All went so smoothly. Love and thanks to everyone."

What I Love About Sunday Night (and What I Hate)

I love Sunday nights, and by that, I mean our Sunday night gatherings. Sunday nights just have a different feel. I don't really know how to explain it. Our Sunday night worship is conducted in the same reverent and respectful way as Sunday morning but somehow, it feels more relaxed, less rushed, more personal, and less formal. Unlike Sunday mornings, we do not have classes immediately following, so people are free to stay and visit with one another, enjoying the friendship and encouragement that is so important in the church. I love that our kids all run off as soon as the service is over to play in the fellowship hall, their laughter and happy voices echoing through the building. I love that small groups of people can be seen sitting or standing all over the auditorium, talking, laughing, and sharing life together. I love that we get to close out each Lord's Day with another opportunity to give our thanks and praise to God in worship. I love that there are often groups (youth, children's, etc.) who have events planned for the time following our worship, giving them even more opportunities to build relationships and grow closer to God. There is an overall sense of closeness and belonging that permeates our Sunday night gatherings, and I love that.

But there is one thing that I hate about Sunday night. I hate that there are so many members that I do not get to see on Sunday night. Some cannot attend because of health problems or other obstacles, but some choose not to be here for different reasons. As encouraging as Sunday nights are for me, I must admit that I am also a little discouraged when I see all the empty seats and think of all the people who I wish were here to be a part of those special times together. I wish that there was a way to help people to understand what is special about Sunday nights, but I realize that the only true way to do that is for them to be here.

Our next opportunity for a Sunday night gathering is tonight, and it's going to be special. I hope to see you here!
