Have you considered my Servant Job?

In Job chapter 1, we learn of the controversy between God and Satan concerning Job. On an occasion when Satan came before the Lord, God asked him whether he had considered His faithful servant, Job. Satan responded with an attack on Job's character, that his fear of God was only because God blessed him. Satan then said that Job would curse God if everything he had was taken away. In response, God put all that Job had in Satan's power, with the exception of Job himself (1:6-12).

In one day, then, Job lost all his material possessions through various calamities. His sons and daughters, also, were killed when a great tornado destroyed the house in which they were partying. Though deeply grieved, Job worships God and does not charge Him with wrong (1:13-22).

When Satan appeared before God again, the Lord asked whether he had considered how Job had remained faithful despite his losses. Satan then made another challenge, saying that Job would curse God if he himself were harmed. God then allowed Satan power over Job, but only up to the point of actually taking his life. With such power, Satan strikes Job with painful boils (cf. 2:7-8; 7:5; 30:30) over his entire body. Job's wife lost what faith she might have had, and told him to curse God and die. Job, however, refuses to sin with his lips (2:1-10).

Several conclusions might be drawn from looking at Job's wife. She was not of the same spiritual caliber as Job. To a degree, she endorsed Satan's accusation that God is not worthy of service when things are bad. And she labored under the delusion that death ended it all. But Job's response to his wife further illustrates his faith in God.

Faith. As Rusty has reminded us lately, Faith is comprised of Belief, Trust, and Action. Belief comes by hearing the Word (Rom. 10:17). But, do we Trust what we hear (Believe)? And, are we willing to put that Trust into Action?

When God challenged Satan in Job chapter 1, "Have you considered my servant Job?", God had Faith in Job (Believed Job was capable of making the right choice, Trusted Job would make the right choice, for the right reasons, and knew what Actions Job was capable of).

Yes, Job had faith in God, but God also had faith in Job.

As God asked Satan of Job, could He ask the same question of you if your name was in the blank? "Have you considered my servant _____?" Faith = Belief, Trust, Action.
